

RUTLAND TRAINING

Installing and maintaining door controls for optimum performance

Tailored online and in-person training

Enhancing compliance and performance at every door

Training to ensure effective safety

Door controls must be installed and maintained correctly to preserve life safety in the event of a fire. Set up correctly, they shouldn't impede the daily experience of users, but too often this isn't the case.

Rutland's training sessions ensure that the right hardware is used in every location, is installed correctly, and adjusted for optimum operation. Our fire and security hardware training offers an interactive and practical training experience, tailored to address the specific knowledge needs of your team.

Our training is ideal for:

Contractors: new installers, those looking to refresh their knowledge or anyone wanting an in-depth understanding of door controls

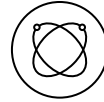

Councils/housing associations: fire safety managers, heads of departments relating to fire safety and staff having to inspect and/or maintain door controls

The training format

All training contains a one-hour theory section, with the option of practical hands-on instruction, which typically takes a further two hours.

Theory alone can be delivered online or in-person, but addition of the practical element obviously requires in-person delivery. In-person training can take place either at a location of your choice (charges apply), or in the training suite at our Derbyshire headquarters.

1hr Theory (online or in-person)

2hr Practical instruction (optional)

What we can cover

Training is in-depth but down-to-earth, addressing key pain points and leaving your team better equipped to handle any door closing issue.

Your session will be tailored to meet your exact needs but can include the following:

Selecting the best door hardware for any situation

Installing a door closer correctly*

Maintenance and adjustment

Troubleshooting common issues

*Can include scissor, slide arm and electro-magnetic closers

Training outcomes

Attendees emerge with a strong grasp of the technicalities of operation for successful door controls, and regularly report improved installation efficiency, enhanced tenant satisfaction, and a reduction in complaints, after attending our courses.
